Road to Recovery

By Peter Lim

Nothing motivates me better than seeing children and adults who are suffering from autism, on the road to recovery. These children are cute and intelligent, yet they live in their own world. It is a great challenge for them to be like normal children over time.

Our studies of 200 autistic children in the United States have shown that 99.9 percent suffered from R1H2 virus which attacked and damaged their brains and wombs, causing them to be hyperactive. This virus is the same virus present in the mother's womb, attacking the child before birth. For unborn baby boys, the virus attacks the brain. For unborn baby girls, the virus usually attacks the womb before attacking the brain in later years. Research here has shown the virus can be traced back to 3 generations or more in some families.

Most parents especially mothers, are not aware that the root cause of autism usually comes from them. Once the virus is identified, it is advisable for the mother to seek therapy to rid herself of the virus. The autistic virus can result in severe migraines and brain damage, with sleep and uterus disorders.

Nano Energy Booster Patch Therapy

When autistic children first came to see me, they were so restless, screaming, running and jumping without end. But within 3 months, they usually become more composed, focused and less confused.

Researched for the last 20 years, the Nano Energy Booster Patch Therapy has been proven to help also those with autism. The first stage of patch therapy of up to 6 months helps remove the viral root cause. The second stage of up to 18 months helps repair the damaged brain and uterus. With further help from speech, psychology and other therapists with parental interventions, the recovery can be sped up.

The good news is that Patch Therapy has almost a 100 percent success on those who believed and persisted in the therapy, with good discipline in healthy lifestyles which included healthy eating. If the damage has affected the cerebrum or main brain which controls speech, sight, thought, concentration, memory etc., it takes a longer time to recover. But if it affects the cerebellum which coordinates body movements, recovery is more within reach.

Amazing recovery of a five-year-old girl

She was unable to talk, focus, respond or make eye contact, and was often restless and hyperactive. In shopping centres, she threw products all over. In public transport, she covered her ears to block herself off from the noise. In school, she could not concentrate. Professional help did not seem to be enough. Her mum gave up her career just to take care of her. It was not easy and her mum was depressed.

Then both parents came to see me for the Patch Therapy support. The little girl was found with a high degree of viral attack on her cerebrum, cerebellum and uterus, with stress and memory loss.

Both parents were determined to get her well. They would faithfully put the patches on her. Within 2 weeks, they found that she was more composed, focused and less confused. They could hold her hands and hug her. She began to speak better, respond, and behave well in public. She was also able to give eye contact and had better concentration levels. The transformation was great in five months. It has been over a year since, and the mother is confident she will be in a normal school. Reports just came in showed she had improved by leaps and bounds, with no virus in her brain or uterus, and a mere 6 months for brain recovery.

Promising recovery of male in his twenties

He was normal till he reached the age of one when he got his vaccinations and developed prolonged fever and measles. Since then he was unable to speak well, with no eye contact and was often down with bouts of fits. His autistic condition was believed to have been caused by the injections taken. But we did not think so as the rest of the family members have also been affected by the same virus. Professional help was sought locally and overseas.

In August, I found him to have a high degree of artery blocks, stress and brain damage, with the highest-ever recorded autistic level in Singapore, or up to 4 times higher than average. The first month of therapy was tough but the parents persisted. The second month became easier with less fits thrown. He was more composed, focused and less confused.

By the third month, percentage reductions in his test showed: artery blocks down by 100, stress 53, autistic virus 76, recovery 54, brain damage 37, and immune up by 50! His immune system seemed stronger and he could recover in 12 months' time!

Those who believe and persist in the therapy will usually have good results. Share this remarkable discovery with others and prove skeptics wrong about Nano Energy Booster Patch Therapy. It could benefit anyone in any part of the world!
